

America, LLC (TL;DR version)

JOSHUA STYLMAN MAR 13 ❤️ 99 💬 57 ↻ 15

The Corporate Takeover We Were Never Taught

Read →

57 Comments

Write a comment...

Steve Martin Count Chocula Mar 13

♥️ Liked by Joshua Stylman

Much thanks for this condensed version.

You are as intellectually humble as you are erudite — and good at finding inconvenient pa beneath the sound and fury of the latest updates of fairy dust.

Cheers from Japan.

♡ LIKE (8) 💬 REPLY

Linda Hagge Linda Hagge

Joshua, N. S. Lyons over at The Upheaval has a piece today about nationalism that made about what you said here today and yesterday. Another connection is Iain McGilchrist's r book The Matter with Things, which posits that modern society has become so left-brain that it is no longer capable of empathy, but only bean counting and bureaucracy.

♡ LIKE (5) 💬 REPLY (2)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

A few people have recommended the N.S. Lyons piece so I just read it. Thanks for sharing. Lately it seems like everyone is telling me to dive in McGilchrist, which I know I need to add it to the pile of things I know I need to read.

With regard to the lack of empathy, I've also read that it may be attributed to calcification of the pineal gland (our north star for consciousness). When I started investigating how this calcification occurs, some of the potential contributing factors *may* include aluminum, fluoride, glyphosate, and electromagnetic waves. If true, this would make sense given how ubiquitous these elements are in modern life.

♡ LIKE (10)    💬 REPLY

Dr. K Dr. K Mar 13

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

One has always feared the triumph of the SJs and that is what we are seeing...

♡ LIKE (2)    💬 REPLY

oliver marks Oliver's Substack Mar 13

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

I've read both posts, and what currently comes to mind is that the very transactional Trump actions in 2025 are very analogous to a federal USA inc classic corporate reorg, aiming for a technocratic blueprint as the desired corporate future state...

♡ LIKE (5)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

Thanks, Oliver. FWIW, I intentionally try to stay non-partisan in these analyses, so people engage with the evidence without tribal baggage getting in the way. The patterns of fact, usually - transcend the left/right divide entirely.

Since you brought it up, I've seen evidence pointing in multiple directions - some suggest DJT's awareness and resistance to these systems, others hinting at deeper continuity regardless of who's in office.

As I explored in my piece about the technocracy, these plans were clearly in motion a century before the current administration - this corporate governance framework has (slowly) evolving for generations. Remember, the Fabian Socialists use the tortoise as a metaphor to signify slow, gradual change:

<https://x.com/jstylman/status/1770428541282177225>

♡ LIKE (3)    💬 REPLY (2)

Mimi Alberu Mimi Alberu Mar 13

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

I've been following Patrick Wood's writing on technocracy, but his starting point is more recent.

♡ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY

oliver marks Oliver's Substack Mar 13

I'm definitely in the 'continuity regardless of who's in office' non partisan camp. Tribal political baggage is a deliberate distractor from the globalist Fabian tortoise evolution you mentioned....not unlike the problem/reaction/solution opportunities by financial crises and warfare. US population pendulum swung from the feckless to the Trump 'solution'...

♡ LIKE (3)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

Looks like we're watching the same movie, Oliver.

Your point about the population pendulum swinging between apparent opp spot on. It creates the illusion of meaningful change while the underlying sy continue their evolution. The oscillation between the left/right nonsense ma serve the stability of the larger structure - like how a pendulum's movemen appearing dynamic, is actually core to the perfectly stable system.

If technocracy is the real concern (which I believe it is), then the distractior to-day fighting around some real issues (war, economy) and other manufac (culture wars, political appointments) serve a huge purpose - keeping us di and divided while the larger transformation proceeds unnoticed.

♡ LIKE (3)    💬 REPLY (1)

John Garn Mar 16

We can't forget that the pendulum swinging between the parties is wh us hypnotized.

♡ LIKE (2)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 16

Author

Bingo. United We Stand, Divided We Fall.

♡ LIKE (2)    💬 REPLY

Navyo Ericson Fear or Love Mar 13

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

I read the entire thing yesterday.

♡ LIKE (3)    💬 REPLY

Richard Beard Richard's Substack Mar 17

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

I tead the 12k word one - did not seem to long to me. Thank you!

♡ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY

Gary'S Gary'S Mar 13

♥ Liked by Joshua Stylman

"The corporate transformation was step one; I believe the technocratic takeover is the end. And (arguably) fascism — the union of state and corporate power — has been the long international agenda.

♥ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY (1)

oliver marks Oliver's Substack Mar 13

Regarding 'fascism', the term was originally entered into the Encyclopedia Italiana by philosopher Giovanni Gentile, who stated that "Fascism should more appropriately be corporatism because it is a merger of state and corporate power." Benito Mussolini was popularize the quote by his muse Gentile.

'Described by himself and by Benito Mussolini as the "philosopher of fascism", he was influential in providing an intellectual foundation for Italian fascism...'

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Giovanni\_Gentile

It pays to look at how the various fascist entities evolved just over 100 years and a generation ago. For me the Italian fascist philosophies are far more analogous to recent world politics globalization than the 30's German National Socialists, whose history has been warped by Hollywood 'story tellers'

♥ LIKE (2)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

Fun flashback: <https://x.com/jstylman/status/1553544540073738242>

♥ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY

Kristine Backes Reclaim Your Natural Wisdom Mar 13

♥ Liked by Joshua Stylman

Thanks for the condensed version, and for doing what I expect might be tedious and time consuming work for the long version.

♥ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

The research has been rolling on this within my "study group" for about 2 years. A cc I had a couple of weeks ago inspired me to finally write it up. Thanks for reading.

♡ LIKE (3)    💬 REPLY (1)

S. Anderson S. Anderson Mar 13

I'm thinking your longer piece would be excellent for a book group, especially si don't have as much time to read books anymore, and the publication process in putting out a book means that books have a hard time keeping up.

♡ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY

Debbie Lerman  Debbie Lerman's Substack Mar 13

Thanks for the summary Josh (I admit I did not have time to read the article yesterday) ar fascinating research and analysis!!!

This article from N.S. Lyons today seems to dovetail nicely with yours, although it does not deeply into "conspiracy" territory as you do. Both interpretations of how the U.S. --and all countries -- have become corporations are worth considering.

<https://theupheaval.substack.com/p/love-of-a-nation/comments>

♡ LIKE (4)    💬 REPLY (2)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

Hey Debbie, thanks for checking this out. And, for sharing that N.S. Lyons piece - just and there's definitely some overlap in our thinking, however, I wouldn't say we reached the same conclusion. He's focused on how America feels like a corporation in how leaders treat citizens (a take I quite enjoyed, btw), whereas I was tracking how I think it may have transformed into something corporation-like through documented changes. The Ramaswamy/Musk quotes he highlights are pretty telling though - that view of America as either a competitive market or sports franchise fits perfectly with the corporate structure I'm exploring.

FWIW, I didn't think my piece was conspiratorial (but then again, I'm a conspiracy theorist haha). Like you, I try to follow paper trails, in this case the Congressional records and court decisions. When documenting how the transformations happen through formal legal processes over generations, it feels less like a tin foil hat approach and more about witnessing the evolution of things hiding in plain sight.

Of course nation-states are real with huge implications for all of us living inside them. But these days I'm far more interested in that supranational layer sitting above it all that seems to operate regardless of which country or party is in power. They appear to operate without loyalty to geography, ethnicity, or any moral code we'd recognize - just loyalty to power. Another while the rest of us become collateral damage through their maneuvering and resets.

If you find time for the longer version, I'd be curious what you think. I wrote this one for my mom who I knew would inevitably call asking to explain.

BTW, just read your piece today. Great stuff, as usual.

♡ LIKE (4)    💬 REPLY (1)

Debbie Lerman  Debbie Lerman's Substack Mar 13

Haha I put "conspiratorial" in quotes to indicate that it is not, in fact, conspiratorial. I was thinking that if the country has been run as a corporation for over a century, the attitudes discussed by Lyons make even more sense. Also, he traces certain attitudes of nationalism/globalism to the upheavals of the world wars, which makes sense to me if you trace the impetus for the legal changes back to the Civil War, which also makes sense. Your article also made me think about that study that showed no matter what percentage of the population supports any given policy, it has a 30% chance of getting implemented, which means the electorate has a near zero impact on what the elected officials were going on for 100+ years, it would be a natural result of the corporatization of government.

I, too, am far more interested in the supranational layer, which is where all the interesting "conspiracies" happen!

 LIKE (4)  REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

Ah, got it - the quotes around "conspiratorial" make much more sense now. That 30% stat is fascinating - I hadn't heard that specific study but it perfectly illustrates the disconnect. You're right that it's likely a natural outcome of the corporate structure. It sort of feels like the electoral version of the Milgram experiment - we keep pushing the button thinking we're influencing outcomes, but the real decisions are happening elsewhere.

The historical timing may go further back, but it's undeniable that the Civil War created the financial desperation. And, Lyons is right that the world wars created the ideological framework - both leading to different aspects of the same transition. Next time I see you we should have a longer conversation about nationalism and masonic dualities as they relate to the first part of the 20th century. There's a fascinating thread there.

 LIKE (3)  REPLY (1)

Quay1 Quay1 Mar 16

1869. The illegal passage of the Fourteenth Amendment was the touchstone. The rest else came from that. Find a book on Amazon. The Sovereign States, No Citizen of Virginia. Was written in the early 1950's. By James Jackson Lusk. The government showed up and persuaded him not to publish any more. He sold the rights and the government showed up at the publisher and they destroyed the plates. Copies survived and it is back in print thanks to the citizens who made it happen. Get it. Read it. You will understand more.

♡ LIKE (1) 💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 18

Author

I had a whole thing about the 14th Amendment, but ended up cutting it out to keep the essay more focused - I also didn't want to get too sidetracked by opening up that particular debate, but I think you're right that it's core to these transformations.

The book recommendation sounds intriguing - especially that part about the history. I'll definitely check it out, thanks.

♡ LIKE (1) 💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 18

Author

BTW, found a pdf version:

<https://archive.org/details/sovereignstatesn00inkilp/page/100>

♡ LIKE (2) 💬 REPLY

Dr. K Dr. K Mar 13

♡ Liked by Joshua Stylman

Debbie, I was going to link in Lyons' piece from today, but, as always, you are ahead and definitely complementary from a somewhat different viewpoint. But all worth reading and considering together.

♡ LIKE (2) 💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

Complementary, indeed.

I'm glad I'm now turned on to Lyon's writing.

♡ LIKE    💬 REPLY

Roundball Shaman Roundball Shaman Mar 13

"Remember when you were a kid and your parents told you that you could be anything in republic of America?"

Such a pleasant fantasy. Or, in its once-harmless looking but actually harmful innocence i to be. Fact is, not everyone can be anything they want to be in America. And even much l today than before. And as any sane person knows, America is anything but a free republic unless you believe the being ruled by a small group of hidden persons and forces constitu republic.

Governments – like Corporations – at heart are fictions. Nothing more. There is no organi objective reality to them. They are mental concoctions fueled by people who believe in th empower those fictions with their thoughts, actions, and deeds.

The United States Incorporated has been a Corporation for a long time. But as already sta Government and Corporations are legal fictions anyway so it doesn't really make that muc difference to We the People in the end. And how are both Government and Corporations i run? What is their goal and mission statement? Why do they exist at all? Again, in the sam together: Everything they do is for the good of Government and Corporations and little-to they do is going to be of any help or benefit to anyone else. And if Government and Corpe happen to benefit by coincidence something or someone other than themselves? They w consider that to be just a form of unintended collateral damage.

"With the addition of digital surveillance and now, artificial intelligence, we're witnessing t activation of this long-prepared system. What started as a subtle governance shift has ev an all-encompassing digital control grid...".

Expand full comment

♡ LIKE (2)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

I prefer 'You Make Feel Like Dancing' :-)

Thanks for the comment, Shaman. Insightful, as always. I'll be thinking about this one

♡ LIKE    💬 REPLY

Hugh Support Health Mar 13

I think you wrote that well and I agree with you.

Here in Australia the corporatization is even more clear. In 1973 during the Whitlam gover had a subtle change to the constitution, a new coat of arms from the lion & unicorn to the kangaroo, and the parliament was registered in the USA as a corporation. As far as I'm aw of the government functions are also corporate "for profit" enterprises, such as police an force.

Many of us are in the process of taking ownership of our 'straw man' identity and becomi unincorporated, for the reasons you've described.

Great article on the most important subject. Please don't be humble or self-deprecating, track - keep expanding the subject with articles like this.

♡ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

Thanks for sharing your experience from Australia - I appreciate the confirmation from your perspective.

I wasn't familiar with those specific 1973 changes under the Whitlam government. Fascinating that Australia's transformation was so explicit with the changes. Did anything else happen around that time to trigger them? I've read theories that Australia may function as so much like a puppet state, which would explain why - along with places like Canada and New Zealand - seemed to serve as a testing ground for the globalists during Covid. The authoritarianism there was eye-opening and may make more sense in light of what you're describing.

It's also super interesting to hear about people reclaiming their unincorporated status. Do you have any resources about that process or Australia's corporate transformation that you can recommend, feel free to drop in the comments. I'm hoping people will share ideas so we can get smarter.

♡ LIKE (1)    💬 REPLY (2)

ExcessDeathsAU ExcessDeathsAU Mar 16

>Did anything else happen around that time to trigger them?

Establishment of Joint Defence Facility Pine Gap (JDFPG) located in Australia's desert - run by the CIA, NSA, NRO. It is critical for all US middle eastern and Pacific adventures - drone strikes, surveillance, clandestine operations, etc. because it is in the Southern Hemisphere and used for low-altitude satellite communications.

The treaty was signed in 1966 and the base was operational in 1970 and completely protected by thousands of US marines on permanent rotation. This is the rotten core of our vassal state status.

♡ LIKED (2)    💬 REPLY

Hugh Support Health Mar 15

Thanks for appreciating my comment Joshua.

It's like many things, we know what's going on quite well yet haven't put the paradigm together so as to explain it to others.

Re the changes to Australian 'ownership' since 1973 I can't offer much. Here's an interesting insight

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=umVj5XQYAi8>

You'll be aware of "reconversion" i.e. legally rejecting the corporate ownership of a strawman under maritime jurisdiction via the undisclosed subterfuge of your "birth certificate", then completing the legal process and declaration that you are the "soul".

As far as I know at the moment, the mechanism to do so is under the guidance of Ann von Reitz. Her life's journey and current life's work is complex and deep. Here's her website <https://annavonreitz.com/>

Here in Australia the good souls working with her inspiration and ongoing guidance are the Terra Australis States Assembly. Their website has the Australia specific documents for anyone on this land to begin the process of reconversion. From "at sea" in the maritime jurisdiction to standing in truth on the soil of the land.

<https://terraaustralisstatesassembly.com/>

I hope this is helpful.

Take care and keep safe,

Hugh

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

India like the country A Reality Apart Mar 13 Edited

I appreciate the condensed version but plan to read the original in full at some point. I have read a lot of this elsewhere over the years but I appreciate the blow by blow account backed up by primary sources. I started reading the long version the other day and then life overtook me. Have you considered making an audio recording of your longer pieces for those of us who are slow readers and have a hard time keeping our attention focused on a screen that long but who appreciate your thought process and your ability to articulate complex topics? 🙏

❤️ LIKED (2)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

I've got no plans to do an audiobook, however, the Substack app has an audio function in the car all the time.

❤️ LIKED (4)    💬 REPLY (1)

The 4th Doctor Mar 14

Since I'm not seeing others mention it; it's worth noting Substack analytics does not accurately capture readers' completion when they use the audio feature. At least that doesn't from my observations.

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

I don't pay much attention to the Substack analytics. I don't do this for a living mostly, I'm just trying to get these ideas out there for feedback, knowledge camaraderie, etc.

❤️ LIKED (2)    💬 REPLY

Courageous Lion Hear Me Roar - Jus Meum Tuebor 6d

I read the full version at Brownstone and found the link to the Substack version there. I was in the process of "mirroring" the Brownstone version when I found this. I am going to place your full Substack version on this page ( <https://www.courageouslion.us/p/fruit-from-a-poisonous-tree>) because after reading Melvin Stammers "Fruit From a Poisonous Tree" I can see that what lies in these two efforts at dissemination needs to be understood. There have been a couple of ways. One was the "presidency" of Obama. It was a well known reality that he was NOT a born citizen. Well, one doesn't need to be, to be the head CEO of THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA INC.

This is becoming a bizarre almost unbelievable reality, but is making more sense in so many ways that it's mind blowing.

My post called WHAT CONSTITUTION? (<https://www.courageouslion.us/p/constitution>) became clearer as OUR constitution has been usurped by corporate "policies" that We The People don't even have the slightest idea took place.

Substack has joined the ranks of the bought off as I have watched my continual growth for years all of a sudden stop and actually start to decline.

Can I mirror your full version on here? With a link back to it as well as the Brownstone post. My viewership isn't that great but the responses and comments I'm seeing on yours is also more than it should be. I wish the communist sympathizers running the so called free speech platform would simply make a public statement exposing their agenda of refusing to allow the truth to come out on important subjects like this.

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

Courageous Lion Hear Me Roar - Jus Meum Tuebor Apr 23

Check this one out written in 2008. The truth is getting out! Read what it says about it. I posted an expose of it on my page. <https://www.amazon.com/Fruit-Poisonous-Tree-Melvin-Stamper/dp/0595524966>

❤️ LIKE    💬 REPLY

Courageous Lion Hear Me Roar - Jus Meum Tuebor Apr 23

<https://www.courageouslion.us/p/fruit-from-a-poisonous-tree> The book that is mentioned here gets into your subject matter extremely deep,

❤️ LIKE    💬 REPLY

Ty Ty Apr 19

You know who else has two different identities? The Lord in the Bible written as both Lorc LORD. LORD in all capital letters is very common in the Old Testament.

♡ LIKE    💬 REPLY

MissRuth Mar 22

You are absolutely right. As an avid reader of things worth reading, there is so much most don't know and wouldn't dare to believe. And it's happening in real time, every day. Amer old corporation, very old. Most people don't know the half of it and don't want to know . .

♡ LIKE    💬 REPLY

jacob silverman jacob's Newsletter Mar 17

very interesting stuff -- both versions . I want to come back and read the whole thing. I lik point out that it is not specifically logical deduction but rather a compiling of subjective impressions. I just put up a piece called "Investing by Men in Vests"!!!!#

♡ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

TBW Mar 16

Great summary

♡ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

Steve Mar 15

Interesting reading down, the changes that were made in Australia in 1973. Guess what yo DTC/DTCC was created? 1973. There has to be a connection, I'd guess.

♡ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

Steve Mar 15

Hi Joshua, very good work on this article and the research. For your interest, search on "taking". You may already have seen it. It explains how the whole financial ownership of stocks, bonds, etc. has been set up so that the investor does not any longer "own" the stock. In the event of a financial meltdown, all "our" assets will be used to pay off the creditors for the derivative losses, and other debts. When my parents had stocks and bonds, they could get paper certificates and the stocks were held in their personal name. Now, no longer possible, and all instruments are "owned" by the DTC, and in effect, "leased to the investors". The Depositor Trust Company is a subsidiary of the Depositor Trust and Clearing Corporation. There's that word again! Corp

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

Liqueta Mar 15

I slowly went over every word of the original article that I had found over at Zero hedge and I thank you enough for sharing your research and observations. Sad that condensed version was considered necessary, but we live in a time of memes rather than a populace that enjoys

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY

Full Name Mar 14

Pretty sure the "Society of Jesus" (sic) fits into the big picture somewhere...

❤️ LIKED (1)    💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 15

Author

The Jesuits most definitely factor into this whole picture, especially with the Vatican connection I mentioned.

Their global network of schools and universities has shaped how generations of leaders think about governance. As their founder Ignatius Loyola reportedly said, "Give me the child first seven years and I will give you the man" - they understand the power of educational influence. I stuck mainly to the legal and financial paper trail for this piece, but the religious/educational angle is a whole other rabbit hole.

❤️ LIKED (2)    💬 REPLY

Paddy K. Paddy K. Mar 14

Perhaps we're near the zenith in the technocratic takeover. Seeing the top technocrats in row during Trump's inauguration appeared to be a symbol to the world they may be close dream. Who knows if Trump is on board with this trajectory, but I find it interesting that D. Jr. was the person advocating and insisting J.D. Vance for VP ... a Peter Thiel protegé. Sta

❤️ LIKED (1) 💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

I watched this excellent video from Derrick Broze last night. Very worthwhile:

<https://x.com/dbrozefree/status/1899882347530772903?s=61>

❤️ LIKED (1) 💬 REPLY

Howard Switzer Howard's Newsletter Mar 14

I read it all and thought it was really great and will shate it, but raising public awareness n smaller bites to get people to examine and contempate this.

❤️ LIKE 💬 REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 14

Author

Thanks for that feedback.

I thought about breaking it into chapters, but I've found people don't always engage with serialized content. I figured I'd put it out as one behemoth so it's all in one place can engage with whatever sections interest them most. That's partly why I created tl version too - to give people an entry point if the full piece is too overwhelming. You'r not the typical person encountering this content - you could teach a course on it, wh most of us are just diving in.

❤️ LIKED (2) 💬 REPLY

Gurabi Ági Mar 13

A szuverenitás elvesztése a szabadkőműves "köztársaságok" létrehozásával történt és tőle is, amit az angol-amerikai szabadkőművesek terveztek meg és irányítanak. A végcél az egy emberiség feletti hatalom átvétele!

A köztársaságokat és demokratikus diktatúrák rendjét mindenhol a szokásjog megtagadása el, ahogyan írott alkotmánydiktátumokat helyeztek hatályba amiket az ő meghatalmazottai fogalmaztak meg egy azonos séma alapján!

A hatalom átvételét szabadságnak hazudott jogkiterjesztésekkel érték el majd nevetségessé és elavultnak "dobolták" a szakrális rendet, a születési jogon és alkamasságok alapuló uralkodó dinasztiákat kiirtották.

A nép döntésének hazudták a saját kiválasztottjaik hatalomra helyezését de ezt csak a demokrácia ideológia segítségével tudták megtenni!

A demokrácia az elavult, a bukása egyértelmű volt az ókorbanis de kitűnően alkamas a felelősség és megosztásra, az erős uralkodók megdöntésére a destabilizálással. A szabadság hazug sosem látott diktatúrákat hoztak létre melyekben megtiltották az ellenállást, ami korábbi természetes joga volt a népeknek a zsarnokokkal szemben!

Magyarországon az 1848 -as 12 pont a mai napig nem teljesült, de egy sem belőle!

1918 ban demokratizáltak minket először, amitől még megszabadultunk de a II vh végén a Kelet Európát a bolsevikoknak akiket szintén a bankárkaszt segített hatalomra a marxista segítségével amit ma neoliberalizmusnak nevezünk!

A gyökerek ugyanazok, a hatalom eredete a fáraók koráig vezethető vissza, amikor egy királyi tanácsnak megjelent valami amiről azt hitték az Isten és hatalmat ígért nekik ha követik.

Expand full comment

LIKED (1)

REPLY

Riff Raffer Riff's Newsletter Mar 13

Thank you for this! I saved your previous post for weekend reading. I always figured that vassals (average joes) are just serfs in a worldwide system, so your points definitely resonate with me.

LIKED (1)

REPLY (1)

Joshua Stylman Mar 13

Author

This comment is perfect from someone named Riff Raffer - thanks for reading :-)

♡ LIKE    💬 REPLY