

Singapore's Descent into Medical Tyranny

Forced vaccination with no recourse... If you want to know what could lie in store via the WHO, look to Singapore.

We have written extensively on the WHO's ongoing power grab, both via amendments to the International Health Regulations and the Pandemic treaty. It can be hard to grasp what its proposals in the name of health, actually mean - and here's where Singapore offers sobering insight.

Singapore has amended its Infectious Diseases Act (IDA), representing a dangerous encroachment on fundamental human rights. Under the guise of public health, the Singaporean government has granted itself unchecked power to mandate medical procedures—including forced vaccination—while stripping citizens of legal recourse. These amendments, enacted in 2023 and 2024, criminalize refusal of state-ordered medical interventions, punishable by fines and imprisonment (Sections 47, 65, and 67).

Such measures constitute a gross violation of medical ethics, international human rights law, and the Nuremberg Code's foundational principle of voluntary consent.

Fines Or Imprisonment If You Don't Comply

Any person guilty of an offense under this Act for which no penalty is expressly provided shall:

- in the case of a first offence, be liable either to a fine of up to $10,000 or up to six months' imprisonment, or both; and
- in the case of a second or subsequent offence, be liable either to a fine of up to $20,000 or up to 12 months' imprisonment.

The Assault on Informed Consent and Bodily Autonomy

Informed consent is a cornerstone of medical ethics, enshrined in documents such as the Universal Declaration on Bioethics and Human Rights and the Nuremberg Code. The latter, established in response to Nazi medical atrocities, explicitly states that voluntary consent is "absolutely essential" for any medical intervention.

Singapore's amended IDA obliterates this principle by granting the Director-General of Health unilateral authority to mandate vaccines—even in the absence of an active outbreak—while criminalizing refusal (Singapore Statutes Online, 2024, Section 47).

Power to order certain persons to undergo vaccination or other prophylaxis

47.—(1) In an outbreak or a suspected outbreak of any infectious disease in any area in Singapore, the Director-General of Health may by order direct any person or class of persons not protected or vaccinated against the disease to undergo vaccination or other prophylaxis within the period specified in the order.

[10/2008, 5/2019] [Act 11 of 2023 wef 01/05/2023]

(2) In addition to the power conferred by subsection (1), where it appears to the Director-General of Health that —

(a) an outbreak of an infectious disease in any area in Singapore is imminent; and

(b) it is necessary or expedient to do so for the securing of public safety, the Director-General of Health may by order direct any person or class of persons not protected or vaccinated against that infectious disease to undergo vaccination or other prophylaxis within the period specified in the order.

The Slippery Slope Towards Medical Authoritarianism

Singapore's law sets a chilling precedent by allowing forced medical interventions based on subjective claims of an "imminent" outbreak. As for threatening the imposition of "other prophylaxis", to what is the Act referring? The ambiguity is concerning and opens up the potential to mandate experimental drugs or invasive measures beyond vaccines.

Note also that the law lacks exemptions for religious, medical, or conscientious objections, effectively treating bodily autonomy as a criminal act.

Worse still, Section 6Z of the IDA provides legal immunity to government officials, ensuring that citizens harmed by forced medical procedures have no avenue for justice. This echoes historical abuses, such as the Tuskegee syphilis experiments and coercive sterilization policies, where state power overrode individual rights under the pretext of public health.

Global Implications and the WHO's Dangerous Trajectory

Singapore's draconian measures align with the WHO's trajectory towards centralizing public health authority and overriding national sovereignty. If unchecked, such policies could normalize medical coercion worldwide, eroding democratic freedoms under the guise of health security. Historically, governments that violate bodily autonomy—whether through forced vaccinations, involuntary sterilizations, or unethical medical trials—justify their actions as necessary for the "greater good" (Lifton, 1986). Yet, as history has shown, such justifications often mask tyranny.

A Call to Defend Fundamental Rights

Singapore's amendments to the IDA represent a direct assault on human dignity, medical ethics, and democratic freedoms. The right to refuse medical treatment—without fear of imprisonment or financial ruin—is a fundamental liberty that must be defended.

As global health authorities increasingly embrace coercive measures, citizens worldwide must resist the normalization of medical tyranny. The lessons of history are clear: when governments discard informed consent, the consequences are invariably catastrophic.

What You Can Do

Just as the IDA amendments have gone unreported in the Singaporean press, so have the WHO's IHR amendments and Pandemic Treaty. If journalists can't do their jobs, it's down to all of us. You can raise awareness and call these politicians to account in several ways:

1. Write to your political representative. Send them the WCH Policy Brief 'Rejecting Monopoly Power Over Global Public Health' for a clear, referenced explanation of what's at stake.
2. Direct people to our ExitTheWHO page for information, videos and useful links on why the WHO needs to be defunded and investigated.
3. Subscribe to James Roguski's excellent Substack for informed updates on what's happening with the WHO's Pandemic Agreement.

What a coincidence:

"Something strange is happening in Singapore. Just as Bill Gates and the WHO's Tedros Ghebreyesus wrapped up high-profile visits with the nation's top leaders, sweeping changes were quietly pushed through the country's legal system—changes that now make it a crime to refuse mandatory government vaccines."

<https://thepeoplesvoice.tv/singapore-passes-law-to-mandate-vaccines-and-jail-the-unvaccinated-days-after-bill-gates-high-level-visit/>

One of these days we'll eventually find out what our psychopaths are using to blackmail seemingly most country leaders into accepting the diabolical toxic gene injection aka "vaccine" agenda.

Most likely something not from this planet.

On the "what you can do" list I wrote a note of protest to the Singapore tourist board I will NEVER EVER again visit the place though this is a pity. Not that this will change anything of course.
